

1. What if the graduation certificate and diploma cannot be issued before the submission deadline?

If you cannot obtain your graduation certificate, diploma and related documents, please submit an original sealed academic transcript issued by your university (the transcript should at least include the academic results up to and including the first semester of the last university year), or other original official documents that proves your due graduation (e.g. student certification, certification of study for the senior year at the university, pre-graduation proof etc.), along with an indication that the graduation certificate and diploma will be provided later once they are obtained.

2. What if an official letter of admission cannot be obtained before the submission deadline?

Please submit documents that can prove your admission status (e.g. relevant e-mails, screenshots of the admissions roll on the university's official website, student record transfer request, etc.), and indicate that an official letter of admission will be provided later once it is obtained.

3. Can I submit previously written recommendation letters used to apply for university (or for other purposes)?

Yes.

4. The recommender is out-of-town or abroad, can he or she submit the recommendation letter via email?

Yes. The recommender may send the recommendation letter directly via e-mail to our scholarship office at scholarship@hankunlaw.com, or the applicant may submit a scanned version of the signed recommendation letter as an attachment to the application.

5. I passed the national judicial examination, but cannot obtain a legal profession qualification certificate prior to the submission deadline. Can I instead submit the examination results notice to prove that I passed the national judicial examination?

Yes. Passing the national judicial examination is not a prerequisite for the scholarship application, and its results only serve as a reference. You can submit the examination results notice instead.

6. As for “article(s) published” in the application materials, does “article(s)” refer only to academic articles or can it refer to any articles published in publications?

Any article published in a publication is acceptable.
